Pursuant to a congressional request, GAO discussed federal acquisition issues, focusing on: (1) the changing acquisition environment; (2) recent reform efforts; and (3) current and future challenges in this area. GAO noted that: (1) federal spending for goods and services has changed significantly in recent years; (2) although the Department of Defense remains the dominant federal buyer, accounting for two-thirds of all federal acquisition spending last year, defense acquisition has declined from peak Cold War levels; (3) spending by civilian agencies has increased moderately; (4) the government as a whole now spends more on services--ranging from basic maintenance, to running computer systems, to operating the space shuttle--than on supplies and equipment; (5) the acquisition process has become more streamlined as new contract vehicles and techniques have allowed agencies to buy what they need much faster than in the past; (6) Congress and the administration have taken a number of steps recently to improve federal acquisition; (7) these efforts have focused largely on simplifying the process, particularly for buying commercial products and services, and on attempting to improve decisionmaking in acquiring information...
