His Attachment to his Church. chapter viii. Attachment to his Church--Could not be induced to Abandon them--He Wept when a Member was Excluded--Never exacted a Salary from them--His Intercourse with Ministers of other Denominations--His Regret at not having seen Dr. Chalmers, and Dr. Chalmers Esteem for Him and his Writings--His Love for and Treatment of Children--Letter from his Daughter, Mrs. Hanna, on this Subject. His attachment to his church. Nothing could induce him to quit the people of his charge, although they were not able to give him more than a mere pittance for his labors. Neither the Greek Professorship in the University of Glasgow, with its annual remuneration of some four or five thousand dollars, nor the allurements presented by some city churches, could persuade him to forsake the poor section of God s heritage of which he had the oversight. The pastoral and the paternal relationship he considered very similar. He considered it as unnatural for a pastor to desert his fond and faithful people as for a father to desert his children. He Wept when a Member was Excluded. I When one of the brethren was publicly excommunicated, the Doctor went home and retired to his garden, where he thought no eye could witness the ebullition of his feelings. One of the deacons of his church followed him to the garden; where, to his surprise, he found his pastor, not meditating, or praying, or glorying over the fallen, but stretched...
